

GOVERNANCE, RISK AND COMPLIANCE

Auditing Corporate Governance

5 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Auditing governance is harder than auditing a process, because the subject is judgement and behaviour rather than transactions. This course builds a workable method. Delegates cover the scope of a governance audit, the evidence available from board papers, minutes and decision records, the assessment of committee effectiveness, and the review of delegation, authority and conflict of interest management. Substantial attention goes to reporting: a governance audit finding implicates senior people, and the course covers how to evidence a conclusion well enough that it survives the response it will provoke.

What you will learn

- Define the scope of a governance audit and what is genuinely auditable
- Gather evidence from board papers, minutes and decision records
- Assess committee effectiveness against its terms of reference
- Review delegation of authority and its operation in practice
- Examine conflict of interest identification and management
- Evidence a finding that implicates senior individuals
- Report governance conclusions so they survive challenge

Who should attend

- Internal auditors and heads of internal audit
- Audit committee members
- Governance and compliance professionals
- Company secretaries
- External auditors and assurance providers
