

GOVERNANCE, RISK AND COMPLIANCE

Corporate Governance, Risk and Compliance Practitioner Programme

3 day course

Classroom, online or in-house

Course overview

Governance, risk and compliance grew up as three functions with separate reporting lines, separate systems and overlapping demands on the same business managers, who receive three questionnaires about the same control. This programme consolidates them. Delegates work through the governance framework and where risk and compliance sit within it, a common risk and control language that lets the three functions share evidence, and integrated assessment that tests a control once. Combined reporting to the board is covered, since fragmented reporting is how a board misses a theme. Technology and the shared register that supports integration follow. The roles of each function and the boundaries that must remain are addressed honestly. The course closes on implementing integration without a reorganisation nobody asked for.

What you will learn

- Place risk and compliance within a governance framework
- Establish a common risk and control language across the functions
- Assess and test a control once for several purposes
- Produce combined reporting that surfaces themes to a board
- Use a shared register and supporting technology
- Preserve the boundaries that must remain between the functions
- Implement integration without an unnecessary reorganisation

Who should attend

- Aspiring and practising GRC managers
- Internal auditors moving into integrated assurance roles
- Risk and compliance officers seeking practitioner accreditation
- Company secretaries expanding into risk and compliance
- Consultants advising on GRC implementation
